

#11_beyond hope

Art project at the time of Covid-19

This painful global experience must leave us something.

So I thought of sharing short reflections on my work useful for the project of a better future in which to live. Because this challenge is ours. History tells us. Let's live it in the awareness of being the protagonists of the whole of humanity.

The walls are non-existent limits. Made by man for man. This work is inspired by that of Berlin, the universal symbol of the divisions. In the ethereal but real mirroring steel of the six components, it suggests to those who face it a dialogue with the conscience in their own reflected image. We all are our own limit. We all are the wall!

Today barriers are space between people. Are fear and distrustful. Are contagion and disease. Great presence of spirit must be maintained in order not to transform this health emergency into the social evil of indifference, injustice and prejudice. But the conscious exercise of freedom beyond selfishness, of knowledge beyond ignorance, and of our humanity always, are the commitment we have to make for us, our children and our grandchildren.
