

Ironman (A) _ Frame Project

20122 - 23x20 cm, h 110 cm – Stainless steel and copper mirror finished by hands - Daniele Basso

"Sometimes it happens that the "finished artworks" impose a sort of detachment. We admire them as spectators of an act made by others ... that we may also like very much ... but for which we substitute empathy mostly with the desire for possession. FRAME project is the attempt to go beyond this distance, showing the work in progress that all we are brought to virtually finish.

Through the reproduction of portions of larger artworks I reveal the true history of the object. Made of work, passion and value... Ideas in progress but power in essence, yet still to be accomplished. Intriguing and curious works in their rarefied dimension of" unfinished "objects, but custodians of important messages".

"Dedicated to Ironman, it actually wants to celebrate the man Tony Starks who bases his enormous fortunes to fight in the ideals he believes in... reminding us that we are the protagonists of our era. That the future of Humanity depends on our decisions... that we all must be heroes! "
